Imagine a representative from a huge corporate company walking into your office and he drops on your lap a proposal for three new websites, you read through the huge document and then you ask, "What is your proposed budget for this project?" - He gives you the answer, and... WOW!!

The scenario above would never happen in the real world - these types of contracts would never be handed to an individual designer they would always be awarded to a larger and well established design company. This size of project would usually involve a huge team of designers, developers, usability professionals and marketing experts. Most web design agencies could simply not handle the size of project. Decisions and planning have to all be discussed by a committee to ensure the site is perfect. For that kind of money, it just has to be!

All of the ecommerce sites below have all been designed by highly respected and well established design companies, and you can clearly see from the majestic showcase below some and how the money has been spent. Beautiful web sites!
